

Transitioning into University

Attending University may be the first huge change in your life. Therefore it can be extremely beneficial to the student to plan in advance for independent living.

There are a number of things you can do before starting at your University to help you feel as comfortable as possible on moving day:

Visit your University before you start your studies

Attend the Universities Open Days and gather all the information you need

Research where you are going. What is the city like? What is there to do there?

On the Open Day speak to a current student and ask them about their experiences

Does your University do a student life taster weekend?

Arrange what support you will need before starting at University
